

SAFEGUARD PRACTICE: PARALLEL WRITING

You have selected to analyze more deeply around how you can shift problem solving meetings to include the benefits of parallel writing!

Individual observation is very effective, and now you can start engaging others intentionally daily and weekly to examine current reality and start making real change ... together.

Daily Stand-Up Questions

1. When did you have a thought that needed to be timed well?
2. When did you have a thought that was off topic by the time you could contribute?

Weekly Retrospective Questions

This is intended to simply facilitate your existing retrospective meeting differently.

1. Ensure all attendees participate for the remaining instructions.
2. Every time you have a solution idea, write it on a sticky note without collaborating or reporting it.
3. Review all the solutions afterwards.
